U. S. Planes Stage Raid Over East

Exercises Are Testing Air Defense System in New York, Three Other States

Planes Attack Defense Aircraft Go Aloft When Reports Are Given

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Army pursuit planes successfully "defended" New England and New York today from a score of theoretical attacks by "enemy" bombers in the first tests of the air defense command's aircraft warning system.

In the mock attack on New England, six groups of bombers were labeled "destroyed" and four others were beaten off to sea by speedy pursuit planes which took to the air after the "enemy" had been spotted by volunteer watchers.

In the New York area, one "enemy" bomber over Oyster Bay, Long Island, was intercepted four minutes after it was first spotted.

The bomber was first reported at 10:15 a. m. (EST) over Oyster Bay. One minute later interceptor planes took off from Mitchell Field and at 10:18 a. m. the interception was completed.

Earlier, two bombers were being flying high in a south-westerly direction over Greenport in the northeastern end of Long Island. Pursuit planes took off from Suffolk Field, anti-aircraft ceased "firing" and the bombers were intercepted about 15 minutes later over Wading River, Long Island, about 40 miles from the spot where they were first sighted.

Tests Are Made

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Two "invading enemy" bombers in a make-believe attack roared in from the sea today off Bellport, Long Island, where they were spotted by volunteer observers of the air defense command, and were intercepted a few minutes later by fighter planes over Port Jefferson.

In making the interception about 17 miles from Bellport, the fighter planes, which took off from Suffolk Field, successfully completed their mission in the first test of the four-day experimental exercises of the air defense command.

Men of the flying corps, the signal corps and the coast artillery anti-aircraft, cooperating with thousands of volunteer spotters, were on the alert throughout northeastern United States for further "attacks" from the sea.

The first appearance of the "enemy" bombers was quickly transmitted to the information center at New York, plotted and charted on the huge operations board, the track determined and orders were issued for the interceptors to go aloft, all in a matter of minutes.

The exercises, starting at 6 a. m. (E. S. T.) and continuing for four days, are testing the air defense system, with special emphasis on volunteer observers strategically placed on hill tops and high buildings throughout New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

Posts Are Manned

Some 10,000 observers, mostly American Legionnaires, telephone operators and Coast Guardsmen, man the 700 observation posts over the 18,000 square-mile area. From these observation posts, through "filter" stations and thence to huge operations boards in information centers at New York and Boston, the number, direction, approximate speed and probable objectives of the "invading" bombers are plotted and charted.

Almost before the "spotter" hangs up his telephone, waiting fighter planes at strategic flying fields soar into the air for their attempted interception of the "invaders."

At White Plains, N. Y., Hempstead, N. Y., and New Haven, Conn., "filter" station observers for the New York sector receive data from spotters and flash it to the information center. Other reports are received direct at the centers in New York and Boston. Combined, they give officers an accurate picture of the "attack."

Through a complicated system of mathematical computation, aided by colored arrows and markers indicating the type of "invading" plane, the time spotted and the "track" of invasion, officers of the air defense command determine how many interceptors go aloft and their mission.

May Direct Planes

The operations board in the information center enables the air officer to direct the interceptor planes directly across the "track" of the incoming bombers.

Capitol Sees Another Inauguration

Here is a general view of the scene in front of the Capitol building in Washington as Franklin D. Roosevelt took the oath of office as President of the United States for a third time. An estimated 75,000 persons witnessed the ceremony, shivering under blankets and heavy coats in the near freezing temperature. The President took his oath under the portico in the center of the long stand.

18 Sailors Die After Collision Near Boston

Schooner Mary E. O'Hara Traveling Home From Banks Apparently Hit Barge 12 Miles Outside Harbor; 5 Men Saved by North Star

Boston, Jan. 21 (AP)—Eighteen men drowned today, almost within sight of their homes, as the Boston schooner Mary E. O'Hara, homeward bound from a week on the fishing banks, was split open in a collision as it approached Boston harbor, and sank.

Five half-frozen survivors dragged to safety from the protruding mainmast of the sunken schooner by the crew of the trawler North Star told their rescuers that the O'Hara apparently had struck a barge and that the remainder of the crew of 23 had fallen, from the rigging one by one, as their hands froze.

Brought ashore with their own hands and feet frozen, half dead from drowning and exposure, the men said their schooner had sunk so fast that there was no time even to launch a dory, and that they had fled into the upper portions of the rigging to cling there for three hours, in the early morning darkness, from 3 a. m. until 6.

Cries Are Heard
The faint cries of the survivors were heard by members of the crew of the North Star as they passed Finn's Ledge, on the outer fringe of Boston harbor, a dozen miles from the city.

Three times earlier, during those tragic hours, other craft approached the men clinging to the ice-sheeted rigging—and the men cried for help—only to see the vessels pass and their lights fade in the gloom.

Captain Lars Lunde of the North Star said the five told him that they had been able to attract the attention of one of these other craft, many more of the crew might have been saved.

The survivors said that the O'Hara, laden with fish and still further borne down with a heavy sheathing of ice in the 12-degree temperature, sank within five minutes as the crew—unable to launch the heavily iced dories—strove desperately to run their vessel aground.

Captain Lunde found five feet of the foremast and 12 feet of the mainmast of the O'Hara above the water near Finn's Ledge and (Continued on Page 10)

British Labor Minister Says Government To Register Workers Prior to War Draft

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin informed the House of Commons today that the government has decided to register Britain's working men and women for drafting into war factories.

Bevin reported steadily increasing production, despite air raids, but added that the country had "now reached a stage when it will be necessary to take industrial registration by age groups."

He said the registration was to "make a list of those who should be called upon to serve the state in the national industry."

The government risked a political storm from the left wing by its decision to draft labor, but observers predicted there would be little formal opposition.

Bevin's announcement launched a full-dress debate on manpower. Conservative Earl Winterton immediately applauded the decision.

Laborite Emanuel Shinwell complained that drafting of labor should not be ordered until the government had drafted "wealth, property and land in the national effort."

General Motors Co. To Make 1,500 Air Engines Monthly

Parts and Subassemblies for 200 Bombing Planes Will Be Produced at Various Factories

Detroit, Jan. 21 (AP)—General Motors Corp., the world's largest automotive firm, today announced completion of plans for a monthly output of 1,500 aviation engines and parts and subassemblies for 200 huge bombing planes.

In making the announcement, C. E. Wilson, General Motors president, said the corporation, one of the "big three" in the motorcar industry, had entered into a co-operative arrangement with North American Aviation, Inc., for the production of twin-engine B-25 medium bombers.

Wilson, from the hospital where he was being treated for a skating accident injury, said that manufacture of parts and subassemblies would begin immediately so that final assemblies by North American Aviation at a plant to be built in Kansas City "can start by late summer."

He added that, at the peak of the program, the corporation will have 40,000 men employed in the manufacture of airplane parts alone.

At present, the Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. have co-operative agreements with aviation firms for the production of thousands of huge bombing planes to cost millions of dollars.

Wilson said construction of a $24,313,150 plant for the production of 3,000 Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines at a cost of $36,497,520 and at the rate of 500 a month would soon be undertaken by the Buick Motor Division. The location of the plant has not been announced.

The project alone, he said, would require 10,000 employees. It is in addition to the manufacture of the same type of engines and of bomber parts and subassemblies now underway at the Allison division in Indianapolis.

Wilson said that the present production rate of 350 engines a month at the Allison division would be stepped up to a 1,000-a-month output by late fall. By that time, he said, employment would be increased to 15,000 men at Indianapolis, at the Cadillac plant here, and at Anderson, Ind., where an aluminum foundry has just been completed.

The manufacture of bomber parts and subassemblies, requiring the labor of an additional 15,000 men, will be undertaken by the Fisher Body division. Much of the work will center here and in Cleveland.

Deadline Is Changed

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 21 (AP)—Postponement of a strike deadline from 7 a. m. (PST) until 7 p. m. tonight, was announced early today by Harry C. Malcom, federal conciliator in wage negotiations between the Ryan Aeronautical Company and CIO United Automobile Workers.

Kennedy Says British Officials Disagree Upon U.S. Entry Into War; Agrees on Limited Powers

British Attack Tobruk; Riots Occur in Rumania, Borders Closed

30,000 Italians Hold Fort in Desert; Nazis Move to Quell Street Fighting

(By The Associated Press)

Britain's desert army launched a major attack today on 30,000 Italian troops in the besieged fortress of Tobruk, Libya, British general headquarters announced, while in the Balkans bloody street fighting and bombings were reported in Bucharest and other Rumanian cities.

The attack on Tobruk, 80 miles from the Egyptian border, started this morning and was reported "proceeding satisfactorily."

The Italian high command had previously noted "increased artillery action around Tobruk" and acknowledged that RAF bombers had raked the fortress, causing material damage.

Fresh units of the German army were reported streaming into Rumania amid widespread rioting.

Diplomatic dispatches to Sofia, Belgrade and Budapest said German soldiers, civilians and communists were listed among the casualties.

Rumania's frontiers with Yugoslavia and Bulgaria were closed, except to a few travelers with diplomatic passports, while Balkan capitals speculated that the widespread disorders may have flared in resentment over German military concentrations in Rumania. Others suggested bitter rivalry between Rumanian Iron Guard elements as a cause.

Other developments brought a quickening tempo to the international situation.

In Rome, foreign observers expressed belief that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, in their secret meeting yesterday, agreed on a plan to get France's co-operation in the war against Britain—by direct action if necessary.

Bases Are Desired

These observers forecast a Nazi attempt to gain bases on the French island of Corsica, off the "knee" of the Italian boot; Tunisia, in French North Africa, and possibly the British island stronghold of Malta, and Dakar, French West Africa.

The object, it was said, would be to make the Mediterranean too hot for the British fleet, thereby crippling Britain's campaign against the Italians in Libya and cutting off British aid to Greece.

Virginia Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, indicated that the role of the United States—"the sharpening of warlike trends across the ocean," as he called it—figured prominently in the Hitler-Mussolini conference.

These trends, he said, "do not pass without reactions" from the Axis.

In Berlin, informed Nazi quarters came up with a belated explanation that the prime motive of the Hitler-Mussolini conference was to insure a 1941 victory over England.

Would Get Malta

Action supporting belief that Germany is now concentrating on an attempt to force the surrender of Malta was reported by Hitler's high command, disclosing that Nazi planes attacked airports on the Mediterranean island yesterday for the second successive day.

On the other side of the world, Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka riveted attention of diplomats by expressing the "earnest hope" that the United States would reflect seriously on her attitude toward Japan's ambitions in East Asia "for the sake of peace in the Pacific and the sake of peace in the world in general."

Not long after Matsuoka expressed this desire in an address to the Japanese Diet (Parliament), the British consul at Yokohama was reported to have sent letters advising some British citizens in his district to leave Japan "before the impending crisis in American-Japanese relations comes to a head." British in Tokyo, Kobe and other Japanese cities were said to have received such letters.

Africa and Albania remained the main theaters of war activity as bad weather caused a lull in aerial operations over Great Britain and Germany.

Wedge Is Driven

Britain's African army, striking along a 2,000-mile front, was reported driving a wedge into Italian Eritrea, attacking Ethiopia and Somaliland as well as at Tobruk.

Military observers in London expressed belief that General Wavell, British Middle East commander, had given the order for a stepped-up offensive to shatter Italy's African empire before German aid

Winant Reported To Be Choice for London's Embassy

Former G. O. P. Governor of New Hampshire Is F.D.R.'s Choice for Kennedy's Post

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—John G. Winant, one-time Republican governor of New Hampshire and former chairman of the social security board, was reported authoritatively today to be President Roosevelt's choice to succeed Joseph P. Kennedy as ambassador to Great Britain.

Informants close to the White House said that he was acceptable to Prime Minister Churchill and other British officials.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was said, decided that Winant had the respect of all classes of people and that he would make an ideal diplomat under the trying conditions of war and post-war rehabilitation.

Kennedy, who tendered his resignation some time ago, was reported to have been informed of Winant's selection and to have expressed no objection.

Nomination Is Expected

Authoritative reports said the President probably would send the nomination to the Senate in the next few days, and well-informed leaders on Capitol Hill said there was little doubt that he would be confirmed promptly.

Tall and tousel-haired, Winant, who is now 51, was named as first chairman of the social security board in 1935. He resigned during the 1936 campaign to defend the social security act against the criticism of Alf M. Landon, then the Republican presidential nominee.

Since that time Winant has been mentioned on several occasions for various cabinet posts. He was elected director of the League of Nations International Labor Office in 1938, receiving 28 of a possible 32 votes and becoming the first American to hold that position. The labor office now has its headquarters at Ottawa, Canada.

Although elected to the New Hampshire legislature in 1917, Winant hardly took his seat before leaving for Paris to enlist in the first air squadron of the AEF. He was honorably discharged as a captain in 1919.

At 36, he was elected governor of New Hampshire, and then was the youngest governor in the country. He was re-elected for a second and third term, but declined a fourth on the ground that others should have an opportunity to hold the office.

Legislature Votes $45,000 to Study School Subversion

Assembly Gives Approval Following Unanimous Senate Passage of Resolution

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP)—New York's legislature quickly appropriated $45,000 today to press investigation of subversive activities in New York city schools as lawmakers evidenced rising impatience with un-Americanism.

Assembly approval followed unanimous Senate endorsement of the resolution. Action of both houses followed by a few hours the State Federation of Teachers' Union criticism of the resolution as an effort to "destroy democracy" in education.

While 125 Assemblymen voted the appropriation, four minority Democrats and the legislature's sole American Labor Party representative balloted against the resolution.

The negative votes were cast by

Ambassador Tells House Group Certain Ones Favor Entrance, Others Want Arms

Defense Is Need Says Main Task Before This Nation Is Full Rearmament

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy reported to Congress today that some high British officials believed the United States should go to war with their nation against Germany but that others disagreed with this view.

Those who favored United States entrance into the war, said the retiring envoy to London, did so because they felt that this nation "would find a way to carry it through." Officials opposed to the idea, he said, believed that it would cut down the flow of war materials to Britain.

Kennedy, who served President Roosevelt in London for 13 months after Britain went to war and went through more than 280 air raids, appeared before the House foreign relations committee to testify on the administration bill for lease-lend aid to Britain and other "democracies."

He agreed with various suggestions put forward by committee members for limiting powers which would be granted to the President by the legislation, approving among others a proposal to keep the President from using warships for convoy duty, unless Congress consented.

Main Task Is Defense

But he said that the main task before this nation is to complete its own rearmament.

"We should go all out to rearm now," he declared.

Rep. Richards (D.-S. C.) asked whether in comparison with that objective of preparedness the question of aid to Britain should not be considered as merely "incidental" and Kennedy said he agreed.

Questioned at length on conditions in Britain, Kennedy said that when war came and Parliament passed a bill in two hours without debate—presumably the emergency powers bill—"democracy went out the window." But, he added, it did not necessarily follow that democracy "can't come back."

At another point that it was "quite unlikely" that England might land troops on the European continent and defeat Germany, he reiterated his expressed view that the United States should keep out of the war.

On the problem of aiding the British, the ambassador expressed the belief that "Congress" should have a closely coordinated relationship with the President. "If Congress could have some small committee that would function with the President, you'd still have Congress functioning but it would not be through an unwieldy body," he explained.

Favors Full Aid

At the same time he made it clear that he favored full aid—"short of war"—to the British. He called for "100 per cent" support for whatever methods of extending assistance finally were worked out.

Rep. Tinkham (R.-Mass.) took up with Kennedy the question of making public reports which the envoy forwarded to Washington while he was in London. Kennedy said the matter involved policy considerations and was for the state department to decide. It might be, he added, that the best interests of the country would not be served by making the documents public.

He said that while he was in London he had "but three telephone conversations" with the administration here "one with the President and two with the secretary of state."

Kennedy reported there was "no unanimity" in British government circles on the question of American entrance into the war.

The carefully dressed diplomat, who reported he went through more than 280 air raids during air service in England, told the committee that many people in the British government felt they were not yet getting all the aid they might normally expect from the United States.

Questioned as to whether he believed a "crisis" would develop in the next 60 or 90 days, as administrative spokesmen told the committee last week, Kennedy said he did not know exactly what was meant and that there were many things in the military situation which he did not understand.

'I Have Never Understood'

"I have never understood, for instance, why the German army permitted a British army of 300,000 to enter Germany."

12 Sailors Die, Four Survive Those Who Live Tell Canadians of 18 Torturous Days on North Atlantic and Comrades Who Went Mad

An Eastern Canadian Port, Jan. 21 (AP)—Twelve sailors died—some in agony and in madness, some quietly in sleep—but four who survived told here of 18 days of torturous thirst and exposure in a lifeboat in the frigid North Atlantic.

The crew of 34 put to sea in two lifeboats. One, with 18 aboard, still is missing. A British merchantman found the other and brought its occupants to a hospital here last night. They had subsisted on meager supplies of water and biscuits.

The four told of a battle between their ship, armed only with a Hotchkiss machine-gun, and the Italian war craft.

"She couldn't have been more than 12 yards away," Seaman Amos Pearson, 24, a London cabin boy before the war, related.

"We turned the gun on her, but bullets bounced off her hull like hailstones. She dived out of sight, a while later, we could see her periscope. She followed us all morning."

The ship zig-zagged in a vain effort to elude pursuit, while the machine-gunners "took potshots" at the periscope.

Then a torpedo hit the Carlton amidship. She went down in six minutes.

Again the submarine came to the surface.

"The sub crew came on deck," Pearson said. "The captain shouted something like 'Where is ze captain?' We told him to go to hell and said the skipper went down with the ship. The sub then submerged."

After midnight, the boats drifted apart.

On Christmas eve, the cook in one went mad, pulled out plugs to let the sea spout into the boat, then dived overboard. Others pulled him back and replaced the plugs. Soon he died.

Spirits rose as the seas calmed on Christmas Day, and the men greeted one another with a "Merry Christmas." But the next day four East Indian firemen drank salt water, then lay back chanting native death songs until madness came and they died.

The cabin boy and the messboy—16-year-old youngsters—died in their sleep the following night. They had cried for water, but there was not enough to meet anyone's full need. Others succumbed one by one.

The last "just sort of passed away like he was tired and didn't want to stay any longer," Pearson said.

Public Hearing Scheduled For New Lighting Project

Kiwanis to Hold Installation Fete

Governor Clinton Will Be Scene of Yearly Event

The annual installation party of the Kingston Kiwanis Club will be held at the Governor Clinton Hotel this week, Thursday at 7 p. m. The officers and new directors for 1941 will be officially installed by Edward A. Dolph, lieutenant governor of Division No. 2 of New York state.

Many Kiwanians from neighboring clubs are expected, as well as the wives and friends of the members of the local club.

An interesting program has been planned by the chairman, R. Frederick Chidsey. The guest speaker is Donald V. Hoch, an attorney of Allentown, Pa., a past president of the Allentown Exchange Club and now the vice president of the Exchange Clubs of Pennsylvania.

Although a young man, Mr. Hoch has gained wide recognition as a public speaker throughout the entire eastern section of the United States.

For the benefit of those unable to attend, this part of the program will be broadcast over WKNY at 9:30 o'clock.

The officers to be installed are: Joseph F. Deegan, president; Henry D. Darrow, vice president; R. Frederick Chidsey, secretary; Harry Ensign, treasurer. The new directors are W. Gordon Burhans, Raymond R. Gross and William Leehive.

For biting his squad leader savagely, John D. Graham, aged 40, a stretcher bearer, was sent to prison in Highbury, England.

Members of Organizations to Voice Sentiment at City Hall Wednesday on Stadium Lights

With representatives from nearly all organizations in the city a city-wide public hearing designed to stimulate interest and support for a projected bond issue to supply a permanent lighting system for the municipal stadium will be held Wednesday evening at the city hall. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock.

Leading the work for the establishment of permanent lights are the members of the Board of Directors of the Kingston Recreation. The staff includes Ad Jones, Nick Kaslich, Jack Robins, Paul Zucca, Sid Lutzin, Ed Coughlin and Charlie Tiano.

Other organizations which have been invited include the Uptown Business Men's Association, Central Business Men's Association, Downtown Business Men's Association, Elks, Moose, Knights of Columbus.

Also Clarence Rowland; Arthur J. Laidlaw, superintendent of schools; G. Warren Kias; Commander Jerry Martin of the American Legion; City Engineer James G. Norton; a representative of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Co.; the Kingston Daily Freeman; the Kingston Daily Leader; Station WKNY; Kiwanis; Rotary; Boy Scouts; park committee of the Board of Public Works, and members of the Common Council.

With the baseball season drawing near it is the hope of the various movements that some definite sentiment will be voiced at Wednesday's session. The majority of the above named movements have already announced their intended approval of the lighting system at the stadium.

SAUGERTIES NEWS

Saugerties, Jan. 21—Mrs. Harold Van Voorhis of Ulster avenue has returned from spending the past week with her son, Edward, who is a patient at the East Orange, N. J., Hospital where he underwent an operation.

The fourth quarterly conference was held in the local Methodist Church with Dr. A. G. Carroll, district superintendent of Kingston presiding. Reports of the several societies were presented. The chairman of the pastoral relations committee presented a report from the board asking that the present pastoral appointment be continued and urged the return of the Rev. Thomas F. Scher, pastor of the Kingston Methodist Church, to the pastorate.

Mrs. Edward B. Fiero of Malden is a patient at the Memorial Hospital in Catskill where she is under observation.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. William Vanderbeck of Ulster avenue, with Dr. Chidsey attending.

Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. Gordon Craig and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Smith of Clinton Chapter O. E. S. Kingston, attended the installation of officers in Emmanuel Chapter O. E. S. of this village, January 14.

William Doyle of Main street has been confined to his home the past week with pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Moore of upper Market street have been ill with the grip during the past week.

Harold Van Voorhis of Ulster avenue was ill at his home the past week.

The date of the annual Dutch Arms banquet to be held in the banquet hall of the Reformed Church will be held February 11.

Ernest Styles of Washington avenue is recovering from pneumonia with Mrs. John C. Kamp and Robert McCaig attending.

Mrs. G. F. Hanly of Audobon, N. J., spent the past few days as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Van Steenberg on Main street.

Public installation of officers in Saugerties Council Jr. O. U. A. M. was held in their building last Wednesday evening with District Deputy Winfield Swart and staff of Kingston in charge of the ceremonies. The guest speaker of the evening was Mayor Raymond D. Gurnee of Nyack, who spoke on "Americanism and Its Needs Today". An entertainment program was presented following the meeting and a roast beef dinner was served, concluding the evening's activities.

Ashtokan Council No. 213, D. of P., held its meeting January 13 with its newly elected officers in their respective stations. Deputy Past Pochontas Mary Breinhart, assisted by Past Deputy Pochontas Helen Arold, was in charge of the ceremony as follows: Bessie Wiands, Pochontas; Irene DeCicco, Wagoner; Henry A. Williams, Pochontas; Florence Van Steenberg, prophet; Eleanor Myer, keeper of records; Effie Benjamin, chief of wampum; Emma Shults, keeper of wampum; Emma Reis, guard of forest; Florence Farrell, first scout; Helen Arold, second scout; Mary Keenan, warrior; Margaret Connolly, first runner; Ellen Maines, second runner; Mary Breinhart, counselor; Mary Keenan, trustees for 18 month; Florence Van Steenberg, refreshment committee; Mary Breinhart and Effie Benjamin, sick committee; H. Japanese Still Think Of Americans as Pals

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP)—Alliance with Germany and Italy has left standing the natural feeling of kinship Japanese have for the United States, says a missionary who spent seven years in Japan.

"The people just cannot get used to the fact that their ally is Germany, not America," the Rev. Winburn T. Thomas of Kyoto, here for a Presbyterian foreign mission convocation, observed in an interview today.

"The tripartite treaty," he added, "was an act of desperation on the part of the government. Constant tongue lashings by important Americans made them understand they had lost their chance for our friendship in future world developments."

"They felt alone among the nations of the world, and so got together with the only people who offered them friendship. Yet on the very day the treaty was announced, one of the most prominent Japanese newspapers came out with a front-page editorial saying that Japan's real friend was the United States."

Nearly 120 international radio-telegram messenger boys in Shanghai, China, went on strike on a recent morning and returned to work that night without giving any reason for the strike.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Fare Enough
New York—James Snyder, a jobless clerk, kept a subway train waiting several minutes while he searched the tracks for a nickel he had dropped.

"You'd do it, too," was the explanation that won him a suspended sentence, "if you'd lost your last nickel."

Right Name, Please!
Detroit—A candidate for recorder's court listed himself for the ballots as "Frank Murphy (James McArthur Platz)," but the city election commission ruled otherwise.

"There is no doubt that Frank Murphy is a more attractive name politically than Platz," observed Judge John J. Maher, chairman of the election commission. "Platz, however, appears to be this candidate's name and as Platz he must go before the voters."

Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy is a former governor of Michigan and former mayor of Detroit, and another Frank Murphy, no relation, is lieutenant governor.

Driver Not Needed
Kansas City—"Hey watch this," shouted Ralph Castle as he saw a motor car skid down a steep, ice-covered street.

The car veered sharply to the sidewalk, skipped between two light poles with only paint to spare, barely missed another.

A big bus appeared. A crash seemed inevitable. But the little car swerved deftly aside.

"Some driver," breathed Castle in admiration. Then he looked again.

The car was empty.

Double Trouble
Honolulu—After their home burned, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith and six children found shelter with neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Comer.

Next morning as Mrs. Smith, alone in the house, made up the beds, the seven-room dwelling collapsed. She was taken to a hospital.

Coal Heaver
Alton, Ill.—The temperature was near zero and coal was in demand as fuel, but Francis Odell, a grocer, found a better use.

Attacked by a robber while stoking the stove at his store, Odell whirled and let loose with lumps of coal. When the attacker continued to advance, Odell hurled the coal scuttle and the man fled.

Burglars' Oversight
Mt. Carmel, Ill.—Ray Kaericher went treasure hunting and wound up with $200 of his own money.

Object of his search was a safe containing $400 which burglars carted away from his shoe store a few days ago.

When he found it, on a creek bank, he discovered that the thieves had overlooked $200 in cash and checks in a money box.

A motion picture being produced in Tokyo is based on the life of the late Ganjiro Nakamura, one of the most talented actors of modern Japan, and Nakamura will be portrayed by his son.

Material for Reflection Is Found in Meeting of Hitler, Duce

Gayda's Hard Job Of Spreading Joy Contains Indices

Announced Axis Intention of Smashing Britain Doesn't Cover Plight of Italy

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The war-drums of the Nazi and Fascist chieftains are beating out the message, for all and sundry to hear, that the combined Axis forces are starting a great offensive to smash British domination of the Mediterranean.

Maybe that's what Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini did decide upon at their mysterious conference yesterday. Still, it is given to wonder why they find it advantageous to advertise their strategy in advance, when their deeds would speak louder than words at the appropriate moment. There's meat for reflection in that point.

I think we find the answer in an article by the authoritative Fascist writer Virginio Gayda announcing the offensive. Two sentences of that contain a world of information.

"Italy does not consider herself to be in the least in decline," he said. "Neither is she isolated."

They're Both Helping

Signor Gayda is a grand writer, and he is doing a hard job well, namely, trying to buck up the spirit of a badly shell-shocked nation and at the same time present a defiant and confident attitude to the outside world. Herr Hitler is in process of doing by military means what Signor Gayda is trying to achieve by words.

The Nazi leader is rushing aid to save his partner from disaster rather than with the expectation at this early moment of achieving a great triumph over Britain in the Mediterranean. True, this combined axis activity, which already has started in a modest way, might develop into a major offensive if luck marches with the dictators.

It will be more than passing strange, though, if the fuhrer is abandoning his assault on England direct, in order to shift to the Mediterranean theatre in the middle of the critical stage of the battle of Britain. It doesn't make horse-sense.

Is Not Set for Long

The battle of Britain is the one in which Hitler is going to win or lose the war—and if he doesn't win quickly his hands will be grimy with trouble, because he isn't set for a protracted conflict. He has the bull by the tail there, and he can't let go without a nasty tumble.

Hitler undoubtedly can divert considerable air power to the Mediterranean, but he must maintain a heavy force of bombers and combat planes opposite England. He had to do that for both offensive and defensive reasons.

If he doesn't keep smashing at England she will have a chance to recover from the damage already inflicted, and prosper industrially—the last thing he wants to happen. And if he weakens his fighting fleet, the Royal Air Force is likely to flit the German bases and industrial areas like a fish.

Two Prime Reasons

It strikes me that Herr Hitler calculates to serve his cause in two ways by his latest move. One is the rescue of his partner, and the other is the infliction of damage on the British navy and air force which indirectly will weaken the defenses of England herself.

The Mediterranean operation complements but is subsidiary to the main offensive which always must be the thrust at Britain direct. Cessation of the attack on England would be an admission of failure and mean that Hitler had turned to something else in desperation.

Circumstances might extend the Axis counter-attack in the Mediterranean considerably. There is always the possibility of an assault on Gibraltar, or the occupation of Spain and Portugal, or a move in the Balkans. The British, however, are top dogs in the Mediterranean theatre as the show starts, owing to the Italian debacles.

Annual reports were given and attendance figures showed an average of 120 students per Sunday during the year. Much more interest has been shown in the Sunday school classes since new courses of study and graded

Course in Mental Hygiene Is Now Under Way Here

A course in mental hygiene and personality development is being given at Kingston High School on Tuesdays from 4:15 to 6 o'clock. Beginning January 26 the second semester of this course will start. New students may enroll at that time even though they have not taken the first semester in this course.

Emphasis will be placed upon the following and their related problems: Factors of normal personality; behaviour disorders of children; biological and psychological factors of delinquency; maladjustments; psychoses of childhood; removal of unnecessary fears; and building productive inhibitions.

The course will be particularly useful to adults who have dealings in any way with children as individuals or in groups. This denotes children of the adolescent or pre-adolescent types particularly. The course ought to be particularly valuable for teachers, nurses, Sunday school teachers, social workers and even parents with home problems. More information about the course can be secured at the principal's office of Kingston High School.

During the second semester the course will be held in Room 111 in Kingston High School on Tuesday afternoons. The instructor is Dr. Elmer Kilmer of New York University.

Plaintiff Seeks To Recover for Personal Injury

Claiming severe facial injuries, William Hopper is seeking in Supreme Court to recover damages from Edward O. Smith. The cars of the two parties collided on Albany avenue last February.

Hopper testified his face was badly cut by glass when his car struck a tree after the collision and he was treated by Dr. Meyers at the Kingston Hospital where several stitches were required to close three facial wounds. He claims permanent injuries and Dr. Meyers testified that there were permanent scars and also a disfigurement of the lip.

The case is being tried before Justice Schirick and a jury and was continued today. Chris J. Flanagan and William A. Kaercher for the plaintiff and Joseph B. Duggan for the defendant.

Unusual Birth Reported By Kentucky Physician

Louisville, Ill., Jan. 21 (AP)—The birth of twins weighing 11 pounds each to Mrs. Homer Paris, wife of a Clay county farmer, was described today by Dr. B. F. Stealy as being of a type "unheard of in authenticated medical history."

Dr. Stealy said that the twins had survived pre-natal life in separate sacs, nourished through separate placentas. The twins, one a boy and the other a girl, were born at the Paris farm home four miles from here January 8, Dr. Stealy reported.

Mrs. Paris normally weighs 160 pounds, is 35 years old and the mother of one other child, a boy two years old. She gave birth to the girl twin two hours after the first. Dr. Stealy said he knew of no other case in which a woman gave birth to twins weighing a total of 22 pounds.

Telephone Cable Nears Completion

$20,000,000 Construction Job Extends 1,600 Miles

Eastern telephone cable networks will be linked with those of the far west, providing the first all-cable cross-country telephone line, on completion of a $20,000,000 construction job which has been started by the Bell Telephone System. It is a new 1,600-mile underground cable connecting Omaha and Sacramento, which will meet future defense needs and ultimately triple coast-to-coast communications as they exist at present. The new line will consist of two cables buried underground, one for east-bound, the other for west-bound and 12 talking channels can be set up for each two pairs of wires.

Members of the New York State Bankers Association, holding their mid-winter meeting, were told yesterday that banks of the nation already have loaned $117,000,000 to build plants for defense, with extensive credits to sub-contractors likely later. It is estimated that 96 per cent of the business which originally goes into the hands of sub-contractors.

Several major brass manufacturers are discussing plans with defense authorities for expanding capacity of plants some 79 per cent, or around 900,000,000 pounds a year. Construction of the new plants would require at least a year and would cost around $37,000,000.

Only 377,280 shares of stock changed hands in extremely dull and uninteresting trading on the Stock Exchange Monday, and prices continued to drift lower. In the Dow-Jones averages the list of 30 industrial stocks showed a loss of .51 point for the day, closing at 129.24; rails were off .18, to 28.85, and utilities dropped .12, to 20.15. Close was at about the low levels of the day.

Commodity prices continued downward and the Dow-Jones index lost .30 point, the fourth consecutive session a loss has been shown. Wheat was down 1/2 to 7 1/2.

Members of 4-H Will Get Forest Trees Supplied

Ulster County 4-H Club boys and girls will be given the opportunity to secure forestry trees, County Agent Edmund R. Bower announced today.

The trees may be had by 4-H boys and girls who are between 10 and 20 years of age, living on farms and having available at least one acre of land. The trees must be planted on their own property or on land of close relationship.

Each applicant may have 1,000 of these free trees, and not less than 500 trees of any one species is allowed.

In furnishing the trees the conservation department makes certain stipulations. Among them: The trees are to be planted for the sole purpose of reforestation and are not to be sold or given away; there is at least one acre of land available; reasonable reports will be made on the condition of the plantation; empty crates will be returned or paid for; the applicant is a regularly enrolled 4-H Club member.

Application blanks may be had by writing or phoning the 4-H Club in Kingston and orders must be in the office by January 28. The charge for expressage will be less than $1.

The trees run from one to three years in age and varieties include red pine, Norway spruce, white spruce, white cedar and black locust.

Endeavor Union To Hold Jubilee Banquet Friday

The Ulster County Christian Endeavor Union will celebrate the organization's 60th anniversary at a "Rainbow Jubilee" banquet Friday evening, January 31, at the Port Ewen Reformed Church.

For this occasion the committee has secured Mrs. Sanford Cobb, guest speaker. Mrs. Cobb is a member of the department of education of the Reformed Church and is an outstanding teacher and leader in young people's work in and around New York. The banquet will start at 6:30 o'clock.

Sunday, February 2, is the official anniversary date of the Christian Endeavor Society. This organization was founded in 1881 by the Rev. Francis E. Clark, who made plans in the Williston Congregational Church in Portland, Me.

Since that day in 1881 the society has grown to the largest religious youth movement in the world, with an estimated membership of almost 5,000,000 members. Societies are to be found in every civilized nation of the world, and in over 100 denominational groups.

Tickets for the county banquet are now on sale and may be obtained from the president of any Christian Endeavor Society.

Draftee Wages Made Deductible From Tax

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP)—Salaries paid conscripted employees during 1940 are deductible from New York employers' state income tax, but the draftees still must settle for them.

The state tax commission held yesterday employers' salary deductions from gross income are permitted "as ordinary and necessary expenses," but conscripted persons must list such payments in their gross incomes for tax purposes.

The commission also ruled persons in military or naval service will not be required to list in gross income cash received in place of maintenance and quarters. Governor Lehman recommended a tax allowance to encourage private employers to supplement army pay of inducted workers.

cent a bushel; cotton declined one to eight points. Wool tops, coffee and sugar were exceptions. March and May wool tops went to new seasonal highs.

Steel operating rate for this week, still being figured on the old basis of capacity, is scheduled at 99.1 per cent as against 98.5 per cent last week.

Earnings of American Locomotive Co. for 1940 are estimated to have been around $8 on preferred stock, on which there are arrearages of over $42 a share. It is understood that the company has around $140,000,000 worth of business on its books in this country and Canada.

Several large blocks of stock, including 20,000 shares of Public National Bank and Trust Co. of New York were offered over-the-counter following the close of the market Monday.

The magazine "Steel" estimates that five million tons of steel were lost in 1940 as the result of ship sinkings due to the war. Steel merchant ships accounted for about 4,800,000 tons of the total. Many of the ships, sunk in harbors, may be salvaged.

The New York Furniture Exchange opened its semi-annual market Monday with buyer registrations at an all-time high, total up to 5 p. m. being 1,613 dealer representatives.

Eight Degrees Colder

It was eight degrees colder last night in Kingston than it was the previous night, according to the records in the city engineer's office at the city hall when the official city thermometer recorded a low last night of eight degrees. The previous night the low recorded was 16 degrees. The highest point recorded yesterday by the official city thermometer was 29 degrees that afternoon.

Take your choice . . .

By NORMAN CHANDLER

Chairman, Newspaper Publishers Committee

NORMAN CHANDLER

THERE are many wise laws and regulations in America to prevent misrepresentation and fraud.

We inspect our milk and our water and our meat; we have strict rules for labels on our food and our clothing.

We have less restraint on our politicians, perhaps. They can promise one thing and deliver another, but after all, we get another crack at them when the next election comes along!

However, if you'll stop and think about it, there's one "law" in America which is more effective than all the rest put together! It is the unwritten law of freedom of choice—your right to choose when, where and how you will spend your money. Your right to patronize one store or buy one brand and pass all others by.

Every merchant and manufacturer recognizes this law. If he fails to please you, his punishment is swifter and more severe than that which any court could mete out to him.

evidence—from all who seek your patronage.

This is yet a free country. We must remember to give every man with something to sell the right to offer it, to claim for it what it can do, to believe in his own product or service. Otherwise we lose our own right of choice.

In a totalitarian state the government decides what is best for you. It curbs advertising not because it fears you will be harmed, but because it fears you will find something you like better than the thing it wants you to have!

Give a government a monopoly on matches and it will bar the advertising and sale of cigarette lighters, good or bad. Give any man the right to withhold the honest news of another man's product and you give away your right to choose which product you prefer.

And how is it that we Americans get all this news which gives us our precious right of choice? You have the answer in your hands right now—your newspaper.

THE DIES PROGRAM

In these days of ultra-modern streamlined warfare hostilities are carried on inside the home front by fifth columnists. One of prime requisites of national defense, therefore, is a solidified, loyal citizenry.

The Dies Committee in its months of investigation among subversive elements in the United States, turned up some interesting facts. As a result of its investigations it has made a number of recommendations to Congress for new legislation which will go a long way toward curbing fifth columnist and other subversive activities inside the gates. The program is divided into nine paragraphs and is so important that it warrants reprinting at this time when national attention is focused across the Atlantic.

Legislation to bring about immediate mandatory deportation of alien spies and saboteurs.

Mandatory deportation of aliens who advocate any basic change in the form of the United States government.

Legislation requiring that all employees and officials of the federal government be American citizens.

The withholding of federal funds from any educational institution which permits members of its faculty to advocate Communism, Fascism or Nazism.

Legislation to outlaw every political organization which is shown to be under control of a foreign government.

Legislation to stop all immigration from foreign countries which refuse to accept the return of their nationals found under American law to be deportable from this country.

Restrictions on distribution of "totalitarian propaganda."

Extension of the statutory period during which citizenship papers can be revoked to 10 years.

A tightening up of the passport laws, particularly an extension of the period in which fraudulent use of such documents can be prosecuted from three to seven years.

LETTERS FROM CAMP

Parents who haven't been able to get much real information about camp life from their soldier sons might adopt the method of a certain mother who started sending her boy a weekly questionnaire to fill out. Questions ran like this:

"Do you like the food?" "What are the barracks like?" "Do you enjoy the recreation rooms?" "Have you plenty of warm clothing?" "Do you get the paper from home?" "Do you have class work?" "How often do you get leave?" "Have you accommodations for visitors?"

And so on, with a different list of questions every week. It was surprising how the lad took to this convenient method, and how much information his parents were able to extract from him.

SELF-RESPECTING NEIGHBOR

Yes, Uncle Sam is now spending a lot of money for national defense, and will spend a lot more before he gets out of what he's getting into. But just look next door.

There's Canada, with only one-twelfth of our population, which saw the danger long before we did, and quietly proceeded to meet it. Two months ago Canada was spending at the rate of a billion dollars a year on defense, and it will soon be pouring in a billion and a quarter. Ontario is a vast training camp.

And it is all voluntary. For Canada is an independent dominion and didn't have to go to Britain's aid. She did it for two reasons—sentiment and sense. She knew that if Canada didn't help to fight off Hitler, he might come to Canada.

SMOKY DEFENSE

Industrial revival has suddenly shown many communities that the smoke eradication they thought they had achieved was largely a matter of idle factories. Today they are suffering again from blackened skies, soot, and soot-laden fog which have reduced the winter's low normal amount of sunshine and daylight almost to nothing. The result is renewed anti-smoke activity.

In one industrial city the problem is going to be approached with the aid of airplanes.

The smoke abatement engineer will fly over the area to find out exactly where the most smoke is poured into the atmosphere. A list of the places found and pictures of the smoke stacks making the biggest contribution to the soot total will form the basis for a clean-up drive. If the smoke ordinance is being needlessly violated, enforcement will be undertaken. If it is a matter of improving equipment or methods of firing, this will be encouraged.

So long as there is no stoppage of necessary work while the changes are made, such action should be welcome. In many cases, smoke-makers will find that the smoke has been costing them money and its eradication will be a gain for them as much as for their fellow citizens.

STREAMLINED ECONOMY
 A friend of ours tells us that a few months ago he hired a young man as a farm hand on a tract of land he had recently purchased. The lad, who was a beginner, was to get $25 a month and his "keep."

At the end of the first month the young man put his initial $25 as down payment on a second-hand automobile. At the end of the second month he spent $25 getting his arms tattooed. By the end of the third month he had acquired a sweetheart and used his $25 to take the girl places socially. The girl didn't like the tattooing so the young man spent his fourth monthly check to get the tattooing removed from his person.

Here is some ultra-modern economy carried to its nth degree.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)
STOMACH AND INTESTINAL ULCER

A woman confided to her physician that she did not go out in the automobile with her husband because he quarreled with so many other drivers. The fact that he was in the right perhaps as often as he was in the wrong made no difference to the wife because she felt that her husband was always "looking for trouble." The fact that this man developed an ulcer of the stomach shortly thereafter was no surprise to the physician.

It is the nervous, emotional, often thin, individual who usually develops ulcer. It is this ever-present tenseness of mind and body that affects the movement of the muscular coats of the stomach, which movement in turn affects the amount of stomach digestive juice and the amount of hydrochloric acid this juice contains.

"Anger will bring on for a stomach ulcer patient, severe pain, increased acidity in the stomach, and even bleeding. Stomach ulcer patients and those with nervous indigestion have their symptoms occur in connection with threats to their success or to their need of esteem, devotion at home and 'mothering'."

Research workers have been able to record what happens in the stomach when an individual is anxious or worried, by means of a tube to the stomach, swallowed balloons, and devices for recording breathing and fingertip temperature.

Many are born with the nervous or emotional temperament, others develop it during their preschool years, often because of overfond or overstrict parents.

While the treatment of a threatened or a healed ulcer is the diet and some alkaline preparation, the prevention of ulcer lies with the individual himself. He must learn that his nervous, overactive, anxious mind affects the various organs and processes in the body. He must try to acquire calmness of mind, which is a hard task for him, yet no task whatever for those who were born with, or who have acquired from experience, religion or philosophy, the peace or calmness of mind.

For these excitable and emotional individuals, lying down for fifteen minutes, on their right side, immediately before the noon and evening meal will help empty stomach into intestine, and give some "quietness" to mind and body.

Schenectady, N. Y.—An electric power substation on wheels that can travel 50 miles an hour and feed out enough electricity for a city of 10,000, is ready for 1941's storm damage to electric lines.

The plant is built on a trailer, and is no larger than a medium-size truck. It offers a new step in quick restoration of electricity when power lines go out and for bombed communities in war it has special possibilities.

The General Electric Co. designed the portable power plant. It has a retractable, trolley-like tower rising from the room to make the connection with a power line. Inside are transformers and switching systems to distribute the electricity. Two types have been made, one for large communities and the other for small.

To make sure that children or prowlers do not burn themselves, the parts which might be touched by outsiders are set behind a heavy steel screen. The rest of the plant is sheathed like an armored truck behind steel plates.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN" By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Century Turn No. 183
 Kingston's new high school on Broadway was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies on Monday afternoon, September 6, 1915, while that morning at exercises held in the school a large American flag was presented by Kingston Council of the Knights of Columbus with the principal address delivered by the Rev. John P. Chidwick, who was chaplain of the Maine, of the U. S. Navy at the time she was blown up in Havana harbor, precipitating the Spanish-American War in 1898.

At the dedication ceremonies the speakers were Judge G. D. B. Harbrouck, the Rev. Wilbur F. Stowe, of the Reformed Church of the Comforter, the Rev. A. K. Fuller, of the Wurts Street Baptist Church, S. R. Shear, of Poughkeepsie, former superintendent of schools here, Charles K. Moulton, principal of the high school, Arthur C. Longyear, the architect of the school, Superintendent Myron J. Michael, and the past and present members of the education board.

At the exercises held in the morning the American flag was presented to the school by Grand Knight Patrick T. Murphy on behalf of Kingston Council, Knights of Columbus.

Andrew J. Cook presided at the exercises, while the principal address was delivered by the Rev. John P. Chidwick, who gave a most interesting address.

Additional interest was displayed in the speaker from the fact that he was serving as chaplain of the ill-fated Maine at the time she was blown up in Havana harbor, Cuba. Many of the older readers of this column will vividly recall the slogan in 1898 of "Remember the Maine." The blowing up of the naval vessel was the act that precipitated the war that had been brewing between this nation and Spain, and which resulted in an overwhelming victory for American arms.

Charles K. Moulton, who served as the first principal of the new high school when it first opened for the fall term, following the summer vacation in 1915, was the last man to serve old Kingston Academy as principal.

It was on Monday, August 2, 1915, that Senator John J. Linson, one of the leading lawyers of Ulster county, died in his home on Fair street. Senator Linson for years was prominent in the political, social and professional life of Kingston.

Senator Linson was widely known as a trial lawyer, and during the years he practiced law in Kingston he was attorney in many important cases.

Third-Term Inauguration Was Ceremony of Good, Simple Taste, Natural and Dignified
 By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 21.—Whatever polemics of party may have preceded or is yet to come, the inauguration of the first third-term president of the United States was a simple, but impressive example of good taste, good spirit and good sense.

There was something natural and unostentatious about the whole affair. The political marching clubs and the air of triumph were absent. All groups inside and outside the government seemed to be represented on an occasion which for solemnity and dignity can hardly be matched in recent years.

There was the chief justice of the United States—himself nearly a president in 1916—administering the oath. There were the leaders of the House and Senate of both parties. And there were the army and navy with their new war weapons on parade—a veritable "blitzkrieg" exhibition rolling down Pennsylvania Avenue in somber speed, reminding the onlookers for an instant of the ardors of war and the new need of defense against it.

The words of the inaugural were not those of political bombast or of exaggerated oratory. They were the studied expression of a president of the United States who knew he was speaking to all the world of America's faith in democracy and her determination not to let it perish from the face of the earth. Other inaugural addresses have been made in the past that caught the applause of historians, and other addresses have been delivered on the east front of the capitol on occasions as solemn and as grave. But none since the tragic days of 1917 compares with the powerful sentences that gave Mr. Roosevelt's third inaugural a world-wide meaning and a historic importance in the annals of the American government.

An inaugural address is not a place to enumerate a program of legislation or to discuss the details of public policy. The first duty of the president is to deliver a message to congress covered that ground. It was necessary for the President in his inaugural to state the principles of the American faith—and he did so with a clarity that will make the document live long among the state papers of the American people.

There were no wild huzzahs from the crowd. They listened to catch every word. There were no pauses for rhetorical effect as the President read his manuscript. He punctuated it with emphasis and yet with the air of a man who was not thinking of the crowds immediately in front of him. It was the kind of a speech one likes to read after and this will be done by many, for besides the radio transmission, it is to be assumed that the inaugural address has been printed far and wide across this and other lands.

The news that 20,000,000 Britons listened and that peoples everywhere felt the throbs of America's inauguration serve to remind of the tremendous significance which is attached to every phrase or sentence that gives a hint of America's future policy in a troubled world.

The United States today as in 1917 is looked upon as the natural leader of democracy's forces. To those who think Britain's preservation while desirable is not essential, the President gave a meaningful response:

"If the spirit of America were killed, even though the nation's body and mind, constricted in an alien world, lived on, the America we know would have perished."

Mr. Roosevelt purposefully made the theme of his inaugural address the preservation of democracy in the world. He did not talk in explicit, but rather in implicit terms of the relation of the United States to the rest of the world, but there was no mistaking his meaning. Taken in connection with the pending lend-lease bill and the unfolding of international policy on the aid-to-Britain basis for more than a year now, the inaugural speech was in effect as much a pledge to carry high the torch of democracy and freedom as was President Wilson's famous pledge to help "make the world safe for democracy"—a pledge which the post-war world forgot amid its own bickerings and its own excessive nationalism. Mr. Roosevelt's pledge in behalf of democracy occupied the major part of his address, but it was in the concluding paragraph that he spoke the words that may some day become the basis for further sacrifices by the American people:

"The preservation of the spirit and the faith of the nation does, and will, furnish the highest justification for every sacrifice that we may make in the cause of national defense."

"In the face of great perils never before encountered, our strong purpose is to protect and to perpetuate the integrity of democracy."

Whatever the forebodings abroad, whatever the gloomy thoughts of those across the sea to whom the President referred as "enslaved"—those who could not hear his address or see it in print—the message of the President of the United States, elected to a third term because of the world crisis, must inevitably prove encouraging to the defenders of freedom in Europe, in Africa and in the seas.

Just 24 hours before the inaugural ceremony the defeated candidate—Wendell Willkie—sat in friendly and intimate conversation with the successful candidate, Mr. Roosevelt with a personal charm that often speaks louder than words removed every suspicion of campaign bitterness and enabled his visitor to carry across the ocean to Britain an unparalleled evidence of American unity. It was an unprecedented inaugural, but one whose unifying spirit and non-partisanship cannot too often be applied in the every day life of the government and the nation.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 178—Hendrick Hudson
 For the past 35 summers the steamboat "Hendrick Hudson" has been a familiar figure on the Hudson river, and even now she awaits the coming of spring when she will again sail under the banner of the Hudson River Dayline.

March 31, 1906, marked the launching of the steel hull of the "Hendrick Hudson" at the yard of Thomas S. Marvel & Company at Newburgh, and at that time she was the largest marine craft ever constructed above New York city. Quite a celebration attended the launching of the new vessel, including a special run of the company's "New York" from her winter berth.

W. & A. Fletcher & Company of Hoboken constructed the engine of the "Hendrick Hudson," and on August 19, 1906, the new vessel made her first trip to Albany. She had cost more than a million dollars and could do better than 25 miles per hour. Her principal dimensions were: Gross tonnage, 2847; net tonnage, 1508; length of hull, 379 feet, one inch (overall 390 feet); breadth, 45 feet, one inch (over guards, 82 feet); depth, 13 feet, four inches; extreme draft nine feet, four inches. Her engine was an incline compound with three cylinders and three cranks, having a stroke of seven feet. The high pressure cylinder has a diameter of 45 inches, and the two low pressure cylinders, 70 inches; horsepower is 6,200; boilers are the Scotch type, two being double ended and four single-ended, with a working pressure of 170 pounds of steam; wheels are the feathering type, with 12 buckets to each of the two.

The appearance of the "Hendrick Hudson" created a stir in river steamboat circles. She was furnished in regal splendor and licensed to carry 5,500 people—the largest licensed passenger capacity in the world; and she continued to hold this position of honor until 1913 when the still larger "Washington Irving" made her debut. Under the more stringent inspection laws of today, she is permitted to take aboard 5,252 passengers.

Immediately upon her appearance, the "Hendrick Hudson" was placed on the Albany-New York route in line with the "New York."

and later with the "Robert Fulton," "Washington Irving," and "Alexander Hamilton." In 1933 she was placed on the New York-Poughkeepsie run, making a round trip daily out of New York, and since then she has continued in this service with the exception of occasional trips to Albany and the annual excursion in late August from Kingston and other river cities to Albany.

The "Hendrick Hudson" has compiled an extremely fine record with only one accident of any import being recorded in her history. In September, 1930, on Labor Day, she had the through run from Albany down river, and that night she left New York to head back to the Capital city in order to come down again the following day with the large crowd of returning vacationists. The night was somewhat clouded by fog, and Van Wieu's Point, five miles short of Poughkeepsie, she ran aground out of the west side of the channel. She was fortunately undamaged, was hauled off by tugs the following day, and returned to New York under her own power.

Death has recently claimed three of the principal officers of the "Hendrick Hudson"—a Captain Alonzo Sickles, First Pilot Harry Kellermann, and Chief Engineer William Van Wie. During the season of 1940 Captain Frank Brown was in command of the vessel, Theodore Conklin was purser, Elmont Nelson and John Garavan were assistant engineers, Alexander Hickey and Clarence Planck were pilots, and Thomas Kraljick and John Antonio were mates.

At the present time the "Hendrick Hudson" is in winter quarters at Pier 81, North River, awaiting the coming of spring and another year of work upon the mighty river for whose explorer she is named.

Editor's note: This is the last article in this series—due to the death of George W. Murdock and the disposition of the Murdock collection of steamboat lore.

Most of the trucks traveling the Burma Road are French and French repair stations have been placed every 100 miles.

Eymann-Leonard

A mid-winter wedding took place in Kew Gardens, L. I., on Saturday, January 18, at 6:30 o'clock when Miss Ida Clarke Leonard of Kew Gardens became the bride of Arthur J. Eymann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Eymann of 108 Elmendorf street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Steininger at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schwartz. Yellow roses and white snapdragons were used in decorations.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Schwartz. She wore a Grecian gown of powder blue and a tiny wreath of ostrich feathers in her hair. Her corsage was of orchids. She was attended by Miss Naomi McCarthy of New York city as maid of honor. Her gown was of dusty pink and her corsage of orchid lilies and rose-sweetpeas.

The best man was Arthur Hornung of Fonda. Ramona Marie Leonard, as flower girl, was dressed in pink net trimmed with blue velvet bows. A reception followed for relatives of the bride and groom and a few close friends. Mr. and Mrs. Eymann left on a trip to Lake Placid. On their return they will make their home in this city.

Van Gaasbeek-Paulus

Miss Vivian Paulus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Paulus, of 130 O'Neil street, and Donald Van Gaasbeek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Van Gaasbeek, of 182 O'Neil street, were united in marriage Sunday, January 19, at Trinity Lutheran Church. The pastor, the Rev. Frank L. Gollnick, performed the ceremony. The bride wore spring pink with matching hat and a corsage of talismans roses. She was attended by Miss Dorothy Van Gaasbeek, sister of the groom, who wore blue with matching hat and a corsage of pink roses. Willard Shields of Lake Katrine acted as best man. Following a reception at Maple Arch Homestead, the couple left on a wedding trip to New York city. Upon their return they will reside at 243 Washington avenue.

Concert at West Point

The first in a series of winter concerts by the United States Military Academy Band will be given in the North Gymnasium Sunday, January 26, at 2:30 p. m. Captain Francis E. Resta, director of music and bandmaster at West Point, will conduct the program. The guest artist will be Ellen Norton, noted pianist. The program will include "Fingal's Cave Overture" of Mendelssohn, the suite from the ballet, "Casse Noiset" of Tchaikovsky; "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2" by Liszt; and the "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra in B flat Minor," first movement, by Tchaikovsky, transcribed for band by Captain Resta.

18th Century Dramatists Studied

The regular meeting of Sorosis was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Grover Lasher on Lucas avenue. The paper was presented by Mrs. Cora E. Drake on personalities of the French, Italian and German Stage in the 18th Century. She dealt particularly with Goldoni, the Italian playwright, Voltaire, the notable Frenchman, and Lessing, Ackermann, Goethe and Neumann, representing the German dramatists. She discussed the talent of Schreier, the great German actor who presented 700 different roles during his lifetime. Next week the club will meet with Mrs. Laidlaw at her home on Franklin street.

NO DEFINITE RULE AS TO WHO BUYS CORSAGES FOR TWO MOTHERS AT WEDDING, SAYS EMILY POST

No Established Custom Such as That Bride's Family Pays for All Flowers at Church and House

According to definitely established rule, the bride's family pays for all floral decorations of the church and the house, and for the flowers carried by the bridesmaids. In many communities, they also buy the bride's bouquet. The groom always pays for the boutonnières of the men (usually including his own), and flowers for his bride to wear away on the wedding trip. But there is no definite rule about who furnishes the corsages for the two mothers to wear at the wedding.

My advice, therefore, to one who asks this question, is that most of their own husbands buy their flowers. Least often, but not unheard of, the bride's family orders them when they order the wedding flowers. (This is very nice when the groom's mother is coming from out of town and arriving at the last minute.) Sometimes the bride buys flowers for her mother, and the groom for his. (This is never an obligation of the bride but a spontaneous expression of sentiment—a gesture of farewell, as it were.) Sometimes the groom orders these two corsages. This is more likely to be the case in communities where it is customary for the groom to buy his bride's bouquet than in those where the only flowers he gives her are those she is to wear away.

No Bread and Butter Plates

Dear Mrs. Post: At dinner at which no butter is served, are rolls buttered in the kitchen? And what kind of rolls are best?

Answer: Not only bread and butter plates but butter itself is out of place at a formal dinner. The one exception is the checkerboard brown and white bread held together with frozen butter and served with clams or oysters. It is laid on the rim of the plate. All other dinner-party breads are laid on the table cloth and for this reason may not be buttered. Typical dinner-party breads include melba toast and finger rolls, which are quite rich and taste good without butter. But the point to be made is that dinner-party food is supposed to be too good and too rich to have one's taste spoiled and appetite satisfied with bread and butter.

Father's Relatives

Dear Mrs. Post: My daughter is in college near a town in which quite a few of my husband's relatives live. They have not made any attempt to get in touch with her although we know for a fact that they have been told she is there at school. My husband feels that she should do something any way—either telephone or write them. She hasn't seen any of them since she was very young and thinks her father unreasonable in his request. I am inclined to agree with her, but I would like your opinion before I step in.

Answer: I have only your description to go by, but it seems to me that the family ties are not strong enough to encourage your daughter to make the first move. Isn't her father going to the college town to see her this winter? If he is, he and she together might go to see his relatives, and then the next move would depend upon how much they like her and she them. But if I were you, I would not urge her to go alone without a word from them—particularly if they are young. If they are old, that is another story, and she should go.

Good Manners Help You To Be Popular With Men

In This Case, Girl Speaks First

Good manners! What an aid they are in making friends with men.

So often a girl is left on the shelf because she just doesn't know her social role. Meeting a man acquaintance on the street she wonders agonizedly should she speak first, would she appear "bold" if she stopped to talk? No wonder she appears awkward, unfriendly.

But the girl up in her etiquette would welcome him with a bright gracious smile for she knows it's correct for her to speak first, to be the one to pause for a chat.

And, asked for a date, she keeps up the good impression. At the movies she doesn't hesitate about what to do next, but with charming poise follows the usher down the aisle, preceding her beau, and goes first into the row of seats.

Then, when the evening's over, she doesn't say "Thank you" outright, for he is grateful for HER company. But a girl can show she's had a nice time with "What fun we had!"

Know the charming manners that bring you good times. Our 32-page booklet tells what's correct for dances, dates, the movies, restaurants, for entertaining, visiting, motoring. Gives introductions; discusses petting.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of ETIQUETTE FOR YOUNG MODERNS to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth avenue, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Food for health:

Browned Liver and Vegetables
1 pound liver
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons bacon fat
1 cup cooked carrots
1 cup diced turnips (uncooked)
1/2 cup dark brown sugar
1/4 cup diced celery
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cups tomatoes

Cut liver into inch squares, sprinkle with flour and paprika and brown in fat heated in a frying pan. Transfer to a buttered shallow baking dish and add other ingredients. Cover and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Uncover and bake 15 minutes to brown. Serve in the baking dish.

Spice Sticks

Biscuit dough (2 cups flour)
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/3 cup diced figs (or dates or raisins)

Pat out dough until half an inch thick, on a floured paper. Spread with other ingredients. Fold half over and press together. Use a sharp knife and cut into finger lengths. Prick each and carefully transfer to a greased shallow pan. Bake eight minutes in a moderate oven. Serve hot.

Fruit Sponge

1 package orange flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1/2 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 egg whites, beaten
1 cup cubed marshmallows
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup chopped candied orange peel (optional)

Dissolve gelatin in water. Cool and add juices. Chill until slightly stiff, beat until frothy and fold in other ingredients. Pour into a mold. Chill. Unmold and serve plain or with cream or a liquid pudding sauce.

Mrs. Eva Swanson's Quadruplets Die

Indiana Woman Is Said to Be in Good Condition

Michigan City, Ind., Jan. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Eva Swanson was reported in favorable condition today after giving birth to quadruplets, all of whom died within six and a half hours after their delivery by a Caesarian operation.

The 35-year-old mother, previously childless, bore three girls and a boy yesterday. One died 90 minutes after being delivered, another three hours after delivery. The others survived for six and a half hours. The deaths were attributed to imperfect expansion of the lungs.

The American Medical Association records showed 179 sets of quadruplets in 120,000,000 births. Chicago medical authorities estimated that not more than a dozen sets survived among 48 born in the United States between 1915 and 1930.

PENNEY'S

Magic Spring

By ALLEN EPPES

YESTERDAY: David Wiley is finding himself in a pretty tough spot. He loves Polly, and they are engaged. But Margo Powers, who is the daughter of David's boss, has come back to Ardendale from Europe and is trying very hard to take David for herself. And Polly loves David a great deal—enough to resign him to Margo if that seems to be the best thing for him. But is it?

Chapter 18 Worry

THE box office of The Arcadia Picture Theatre was situated so that Polly could see for some distance up and down Main Street. It was, she thought, rather like living in a glass house, or playing a goldfish role.

But each time she saw Margo Powers driving by with Peter Wiley sitting beside her in her smart-looking roadster, she had a sinking sensation in her heart, a sensation that went even further and did things to her stomach.

Suppose Margo won Peter away from her while she was trying to make a little money by working at her cashier's job? Suppose Peter got accustomed to all the things Margo could do for him? (She had seen them going into the drugstore for sodas a number of times, and she knew that Margo had bought Peter an expensive pair of water wings to help him with his swimming.) Suppose all these things impressed the boy, made him decide that Margo was the girl his Cousin David ought to marry?

Some of these unhappy thoughts were with her now as she saw Margo's car turn the corner into Main Street. And she was a bit puzzled when Margo stopped the car in front of the theatre, and got out.

"I'll be right back," she heard Margo say. "Be sure to keep your eye on that lunch basket!"

"Sure, Margo!" Peter called back.

Margo came up to the box office.

"Hello, Polly," she said.

"Hello, Margo," Polly replied. She waved at Peter, who was trying to get a glimpse of her. "How nice of you to give so much time to Peter. He's looking wonderful, isn't he?"

"Yes," said Margo. "As brown as a berry—and his leg getting stronger all the time. I'm really enjoying my afternoons with him. But what I stopped by for was to ask if you could come up to tea Sunday afternoon?"

"Why, yes," said Polly. "I suppose so."

"I'm going to do some entertaining," Margo went on. "and I remember that Sunday is the only day you have. A friend of mine is arriving Saturday afternoon, and I want to have a little party for him. Not a big party—but just a dozen or so people dropping in."

"I'd like to come," Polly said. She laughed. "After being shut up in this glass cage, it'll be nice to relax over some tea."

"Then I'll expect you," said Margo. Then, just before turning away, she said: "By the way, this friend of mine is a doctor. He did a lot of studying in Europe before everything got so topsy-turvy over there. I'm going to have him take a good look at Peter's leg."

Polly's heart took a drop then that practically floored her. Trips to the pool in a yellow roadster. Soda in the corner drug store. Water wings to help with swimming. And now a doctor to have a look at the poor shrunken little limb—Margo was certainly going the limit.

"That's wonderful!" she said, when she had swallowed a lump that tried to choke her. "I do hope he'll be able to tell you something encouraging."

"So do I," said Margo. "I think it's scandalous for the medical profession to brag so much about the progress it's made, and then not be able to do something for Peter."

"I suppose you've told Peter about it?"

"No, not yet. I thought I'd tell him today. We're having a picnic out at the Inn."

"I wouldn't, if I were you," said Polly.

"I wouldn't get his hopes up," Polly went on. "He's a sensitive sort of boy, and I don't think it would be kind to get his hopes up and then smash them."

"I see what you mean," said Margo. "All right I won't tell him. I'll wait until Doctor McNeill comes."

"Thank you, Margo. Peter means an awful lot to David and me, and I would hate to have him hurt by an overwhelming sense of disappointment."

"But I have told David," Margo said.

"That's all right. David probably feels the same way about it as I do. He'll not want Peter to know, either."

"David was up last night for dinner," Margo said. "I simply couldn't keep from telling him how eager I was to help Peter back to a normal boyhood."

"I understand," said Polly. "I'm glad you feel about Peter that way."

Margo moved away. "Come Sunday around four-thirty," she called. "I'll be expecting you."

"Thanks," Polly said, leaning forward to call through the round opening in the glass of the ticket booth. "I'll be there."

Margo got back into the car.

Bitterness

SHE and Peter waved, and were off—Polly gazed across the sun-washed street, absentmindedly fingering a stack of dimes and quarters—So David had dined with Margo the evening before. They had discussed Peter just as she and David had so often done. David and Margo, while she sat in a ticket booth tearing off yellow slips and making change. Well, Polly, you asked for it! You said working was more important than having time for seeing David! Aunt Susan warned you that he would be seeing some other girl, if left alone—

And now—and now—

She suddenly remembered that she only had a few more days left in which to hold down the cashier's job. Letitia's vacation was about over. She would be coming back from New York shortly. And then there would be no more job. It meant she would have to start looking around once more.

But the thought, oddly enough, did not disturb her. She even found herself feeling a sort of elation over the knowledge that she would soon be free to be with Peter, free to take him out for his swims in David's little car. She would have time to work in the flower beds, to go on with her plans for dolling up the grounds around the old Inn.

"When does the feature picture start?" a woman asked.

"In about fifteen minutes," Polly replied, coming back to the present.

"All right, let me have a ticket," the woman said. "I do wish they'd stop having double features. I'd rather pay less and see just one long picture, and maybe a comedy—a short one—along with the newswheel."

"Why not speak to the manager?" Polly said. "I'm sure he'd like to know how his patrons feel about matters."

"I think I'll do that," said the woman.

She went on inside.

Wardrobe Problem

OTHERS came up to the window. There was a brisk sale of tickets for an hour or so. But even while she worked, Polly was thinking about Sunday, and Margo's tea. She was making plans about what she would wear. Her wardrobe was pretty limited, but she ought to be able to get that old dotted Swiss dress in shape. Aunt Susan would help her. Margo Powers and herself wouldn't be too noticeable—the girl who bought her clothes in Paris and London, and the girl who was wearing something that had once belonged to her mother—

And she was right.

She realized this soon after her arrival at the Powers house late Sunday afternoon. There wasn't any noticeable contrast between herself and Margo. Only a very practiced eye could tell that Polly's dress was homemade, and Margo's out of a smart Paris shop.

David, for one, thought that Polly looked even lovelier than Margo. The black-haired girl, and the one whose hair was red and piled high upon her head. Both girls extremely easy to look at and looking breath-takingly charming; Polly in white and pink, and Margo in pale green with touches of black.

"Gosh, Sweetness," David was saying now to Polly. "I never saw you look so dandy beautiful. You look like something out of one of those fashion magazines."

"Thank you, David," Polly said. "But you've seen this dress lots of times before."

"Have I?" said David. "That's funny. I thought it was something you had sent down from New York."

"Silly! That shows how bad you are at observing what a girl wears."

"But surely the hat's new."

Polly shook her head. "Third summer I've had it," she said. And then: "Isn't that a lovely dress Margo's wearing? I do love green, especially on blondes and redheads."

"And I like white on girls like you," said David.

"Her doctor friend is awfully nice, isn't he?" Polly went on. "I like those little touches of gray at his temples. They make him look important."

"Yes, he is nice," David said. "I've had a long talk with him. He wants to have a swim in our pool."

"Maybe he can tell you something about the spring water, too," Polly said.

David grinned. "You mean whether or not there's magic in it?"

"Perhaps."

"Well, seriously, honey," said David. "I don't think there is. But Doctor McNeill's going to have his swim just the same. I thought it would be fun to have a picnic out at the Inn—the four of us; you, Margo, the doctor and me. How about it?"

"I'd love it," said Polly. "But I have a few more days at the theatre. Will Doctor McNeill be here that long?"

"He's going to stay a week, he says."

"Then we can have the picnic!" Polly said. "The first day I'm through working."

Thanks to L. L. Daugherty, Jacksonville, wholesaler, we present for your edification a few of the thousands of letters President Roosevelt has received from the public in response to his invitation, contained in some of the "fire-side chats," that the American people write direct to the White House when the occasion demands. These are taken from a book entitled "Dear Mister President," and the samples are lifted from Martin Anderson's "Today" column in the Orlando (Fla.) Morning Sentinel. "Some of them," Mr. Anderson points out, "may be a little risqué, some are pitiful in their tragic drama; but, withal, there is a definite skein of humor in the whole lot of them."

"Will you please send me about two thousand dollars, and don't send a check—send in money already coined out."

"Now Mr. Roosevelt: I want you to send me a red car and send me a U. S. check book. I am tired of working. I have nothing to eat and no table to eat it off of."

"I am blond headed and trying to live a Christian life."

This seems fair enough: Professor—Er, my dear, what's the meaning of this vase of flowers on the table today?

Wife—Meaning? Why today's your wedding anniversary.

Professor—Indeed! Well, well, do let me know when yours is, so I may do the same for you.

No man is perfect and few are so imperfect but what they have their good qualities.

Another impediment to marriage nowadays is the increasing difficulty in supporting the government and a wife on one income.

Chubb—Huh, wise guy, eh? Why you're just like a whip in the hands of an expert.

Duff—Smart, you mean?

Chubb—Naw, cracked.

You may think you have knocked around a bit and know a thing or two but after son reaches high school he soon convinces you that you don't know anything.

not expected to appear before the jury had been chosen.
Her husband, accompanied by his brother, Phillip, a Philadelphia attorney, was in the court room.
The jury panel consisted of 29 persons including several women and two negroes. The court, early in questioning of jurors, sustained an objection by the state to a defense question designed to show whether great credibility would be given the testimony of "a white person of high social standing" than that of a negro butler.
Millbank Is Sentenced
New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Harold N. Millbank, 56-year-old attorney, accused of stealing $120,000 from the firm in which he was once a partner, was sentenced to Sing Sing prison today with the court's exhortation—"You stole from your own flesh and blood." Millbank was given a term of 1½ to 2½ years, after he had pleaded guilty to third degree forgery. He had been in charge of the credit, legal and taxation departments of Millbank, Leaman and Company, woolen import firm in which relatives were members. A probation report said that Millbank, who formerly lived at South Orange, N. J., had committed the thefts to enable him to maintain a higher social status.

Financial and Commercial

New York City Produce Market
New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—At-tempts to rally the stock market behind the rails were short-lived today and initial gains of fractions to around a point were converted into declines of as much in many cases near the final hour.
Motors weakened and steels, well ahead at one time, shifted into the losing column. Carriers managed to cling to portions of their morning recoveries.
Dealings picked up and slowed at intervals with volume expanding in selling periods. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 600,000 shares.
Early buying was attributed partly to the idea of speculative forces that a revival was due because the list had been in a rut eight consecutive sessions. In difference persisted in many quarters, however, in view of war and congressional impasses.
Carrier bonds did better. Commodities were a shade uneven.
Among favored stocks were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Union Pacific, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, U. S. Rubber, Armour preferred, Anaconda and United Aircraft. A few of these eventually slipped.
Lack of rallying vigor was shown by Westinghouse, General Motors, Du Pont and Allied Chemical, U. S. Steel and Bethlehem wavered after forenoon upturns.
The curb support was accorded Glen Alden Coal, Bell Aircraft, International Petroleum and Pennroad. Faltering were Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Brewster Aero and American Gas.

Charities Office Is Taken Over by Election Board
Removal of the State Charities' Aid Association from the county building on John street at the beginning of this year released for use an office in the building. This office has been taken over by the Ulster County Board of Elections and is used for a business office for the board. The old office across the hall has been taken over for filing of records.
For some time the frame addition adjacent to the public parking grounds has been used by the board of elections for storage purposes and many records of the board were kept there because of lack of space in the main office in the stone building. These records will be moved to the main building. For some time these records have been endangered by cigarettes carelessly thrown from parked cars into an accumulation of leaves each fall. Removal of the records to the main building will eliminate this hazard.
Injured in Crash
Mrs. Adeline MacMillan of Montclair, N. J., is still at the Veterans' Memorial Hospital, Ellenville, recovering from the shock of an accident Saturday afternoon when the car in which she was riding crashed into a truck on the curve just north of the Millard Davis place near Kerhonkson. Mrs. MacMillan was not seriously injured, outside the shock she sustained, receiving some cuts about the face from broken cigarettes. Her son, Norbert, who was with her, received some abrasions about the chin. He was not hospitalized.
Hit by Car
Mose Storms, who gave his address as Port Jervis, but who has been employed at the Sobel place, Leurenkille, received a broken right leg and other injuries when he was struck while walking along the road Friday night. He is at the Veterans' Memorial Hospital, Ellenville. Storms and another man were returning from the movies at Ellenville when he was struck by a car driven by George Link of Monticello. Link said that he had been blinded by the lights of an approaching truck and did not see Storms walking along the road.
To Hold Round Table
A series of informal round table discussions touching upon area history led by A. Elwood Corning, will be given Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock, beginning February 1 and ending March 11, at the Newburgh Y. M. C. A.

Legislature Votes $45,000 to Study School Subversion

Assemblymen J. Eugene Zimmer, Troy ALP; Arthur Wachtel, Bronx; Hulan E. Jack, New York; Hamlet O. Catenaccio, New York, and Julius J. Gans, Bronx.
Democratic Minority Leader Irwin Steingut, while voting for the appropriation, protested against presentation of such requests "on 24 hours notice" and failure of the committee to present an interim report.
"I know very little about the immediate need for this appropriation," he said, "and as leader of the minority, I want to know what is going on. I hereby serve notice of future opposition to any request for funds without proper notice to the members of the legislature."
Republican Majority Leader Irvin M. Javes retorted that "the main point is the work thus far done by the committee does justify this added appropriation."
"If we always must know what a committee is going to do with an appropriation," he added, "there never would be a committee or commission created in the state of New York."
Assemblyman Herbert A. Rapp, associate chairman of the committee, explained funds of the group as "practically exhausted" because "we have had to fight nearly by every step through the courts."
Request for an investigation of mortgage foreclosures in an effort to simplify procedure and reduce costs.
Seeking defeat of the appropriation empowering the school inquiry, the Teachers' Federation distributed a pamphlet to lawmakers maintaining the legislative investigating committee created by the 1940 legislature is attempting to "camouflage its motives."

Rod Sagendorf Still Leads League Scorers With 40; Middies Out to Clinch Title Tonight

Middletown High School's rapid-fire basketball team can clinch the first half of the DUSO League Friday evening when it plays at Monticello. The Middies will be heavy favorites.

So far this year, Middletown has rolled over Kingston, Port Jervis, Liberty and Ellenville. In the four contests the Middies have scored 151 points as against 72 for the opponents. Against Liberty Middletown was limited to 28 points. In the other three games the Middies scored at least 40 markers.

After its showing against Kingston last Friday, Monticello can hardly expect to stop the Blue and White juggernaut which is the most sparkling performance has been that of Rod Sagendorf, the young freshman star who is at present leading the league in scoring with 40 points. Sagendorf has filled one of the forward posts very capably and judging from his first year's work with the team, Warren Kias doesn't have to worry for a few more years with the hope of finding a sure-fire forward.

Tonight Kingston ends its first half play by meeting Newburgh at the Hill City gym. Kingston will be favorites. Other games include the Middletown-Monticello fracas and the Port Jervis at Ellenville game. Port Jervis and Middletown are favorites.

Rod Sagendorf and Frankie Finn are still the top men in league scoring. Sagendorf has 40 while the Liberty ace has collected 37. Following are the first ten men:

Sagendorf, K. 17 6 40
Finn, Lib. 16 5 37

Hudson Valley Pup Tent Names Officers for 1941

The annual meeting and installation of newly elected officers of Hudson Valley Pup Tent No. 16, Military Order of Cootties, was held at the Elks' Club Sunday, followed by a dinner and refreshments. A large gathering attended the meeting from Poughkeepsie, Middletown, Port Jervis, Beacon, Newburgh and Kingston.

The following cooties were chosen for the ensuing year: James Shaw of Poughkeepsie, seam squirrel; George H. Decker, blanket bum; Chris. Perry, hide animal; Holmes S. Smith, custodian of the crummy duffle bag; E. J. Wortman was appointed hungry nit; Frank J. Stopski, shirt reader; Edward D. Smith, provost marshal; Charles Kissam, Jimmy Legs; James Doran, pill pusher; Gus Hirsch, sex pilot; trustees or tight wads, E. J. Wortman, John H. L. Greene and Fred Hicks.

The installing officer was John H. L. Greene, past seam squirrel of Pup Tent No. 16, M. O. C.

Shea, 23, Goes Through 10-Hour Dental Ordeal

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Memorandum for Congress: If you have an extra medal of honor lying around, have it polished up for John Shea, a 23-year-old patriot, who yesterday all but made the supreme sacrifice for his country.

Rejected by the army because of defective teeth, he sat from 10 a. m. until 8:30 p. m. in a dentist's chair and suffered proddings, pulls and drillings and fillings, until at last his molars were in order.

Three teeth pulled. Four filled. Five crowns repaired. Two removable bridges inserted. Today he awaits another army examination.

Series to Continue

This evening at the Knights of Columbus club rooms at 745 Clock the second series of games of the shuffleboard tournament between the Elks and Knights will be played.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Jan. 21 (AP)—Ralph Kercheval, the football Dodgers' great kicker, shortly will be ordered to Fort Robinson, Neb., for a year's active duty with his reserve regiment. Henry Armstrong is going to give Eddie Mead two-thirds of the $19,000 he got out of his last fight, instead of the customary one-third. Clark Shaughnessy will not take the All-Star coaching assignment (if offered him) because he refuses to lead a team against the Chicago Bears. Pittsburghers who came home in a special train to see Fritz Zivie beat Armstrong, took back nearly $100,000 in winnings.

Just Another Ferdinand

A foursome of fair Shawnee, Okla., golfers were trudging over the course when a bossy brother appeared smack in the middle of the fairway. A sharp reversal of rules was in order. Instead of keeping their heads down and their eyes on the ball, the girls kept their heads up and their eyes on the bull. "Fore" cried one. "Sukey" shouted another. "Scat," ordered a third. But apparently the bull was just another Ferdinand, for it paid them no mind, but kept right on sniffing the flowers along the edge of the fairway.

Oditorium

Students at North Dakota State have organized a "no third term for Cincinnati" we want the Brooklyn Dodgers Club, Inc., with membership cards, a woman's auxiliary and everything. The excitement was so great, Coach Roy Hanson fainted on the bench as his Western Illinois State Teachers quint rallied in the last minute to beat Iowa State Teachers, 52-50. On their visit to Omaha, every man on the West Texas State team was initiated into the Nebraska Star Dusters Club, membership in which is limited to those over six feet, four.

Labor Act

(In order to acquaint the general public, employers and workers with the purposes and provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, The Freeman is presenting a series of short articles in cooperation with the Wage and Hour Division, U. S. Department of Labor.)

No. 10—Farm Exemptions

The minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act do not apply to work done on a farm or products grown on that farm. The farmer does not have to pay his hired hand, persons who pick his berries, saw his wood, or harvest his crops, 30 cents an hour or time and one-half for overtime.

Employees of greenhouses or nurseries engaged in planting, cultivating and harvesting plants and flowers are exempt from the minimum wage and overtime provisions of the act.

Persons employed with the area of production engaged in packing, storing, ginning, canning or processing, etc., of agricultural commodities for market are also exempt from the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions.

In connection with the above exemption, the employee is engaged in the area of production (1) if the materials, except fresh fruits and vegetables, all come from the general vicinity and the number of employees does not exceed seven; (2) if the materials, again excepting fresh fruits and vegetables, all come from farms within ten miles and the work is being done in a town of 2,500 or less; (3) or, as to perishable fresh fruits and vegetables, if the materials all come from farms in the general vicinity and the number of employees does not exceed ten.

(Persons seeking further information may obtain it by writing to Arthur J. White, Regional Director, Wage and Hour Division, 341 Ninth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Literature will be furnished upon request.)

Total deaths in the United States for 1940 are estimated at 1,420,000.

Senate Defers Any Move on Assembly Milk Resolution

State Body Decides It Would Give Matter Further Consideration; Chaos Is Feared

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21 (AP)—Action on an Assembly-approved resolution requesting Secretary of Agriculture Wickard to continue enforcement of the federal order controlling the New York city milk market was deferred by New York's Senate today for "further consideration."

Expressing fear of "chaos and confusion" in the state's two-billion dollar a year dairy industry, the Assembly quickly passed the measure last night urging Wickard to continue existing regulations until a new order can be drafted by the federal government and approved by dairymen supplying the metropolitan market.

Today, however, the Senate referred the measure to the finance committee. Senate Majority Leader or Joe R. Hanley predicted the proposal would be acted upon early next week.

Meantime, legislative leaders gave consideration to belief expressed by some Washington officials that the planned suspension may open the way for submission to dairymen of an entirely new order before February 28.

Wickard announced last Saturday he would suspend the agreement February 28, after a federal court enjoined him, at the behest of the Dairymen's League, from holding a second referendum on proposed amendments to the pact.

Republican Assembly Majority Leader Irving M. Ives explained the resolution, sponsored by Republican Assemblyman Howard N. Allen, Dutchess county, offered "no condemnation" of Wickard but added "we feel he made a serious mistake." The resolution inspired heated comment despite unanimity of the vote.

Democratic Assemblyman Arthur Wachtel, New York city, proposed creation of a joint legislative committee to investigate costs of producing, transporting, handling and distributing milk.

Asking a $500,000 appropriation, he declared the state Rogers-Allen milk control law has failed to improve conditions in a dairy industry regulated "in haphazard, insecure manner."

Other proposed legislation would: Require a uniform system of cost accounting by milk dealers to show the amount of fluid milk used for milk products and permit the state agriculture department to determine accuracy of dealer records. (Wachtel.) Permit sale of milk by dairymen on their own farms without a license (Whitney).

Kennedy Says British Disagree

000 to escape from Dunkerque," he said.

If the German air force was as strong as they claimed, he continued, he thought they had a perfect chance to annihilate that British force.

The diplomat said also he could not understand why the Germans had not wrought greater destruction in Britain's industrial centers.

"If they have the strength to capture the air," he said, "the crisis might come any day. So far, they haven't indicated they have that strength."

Representative Fish (R., N. Y.) asked Kennedy whether he knew the war aim of the British.

"I certainly don't, sir," the ambassador replied.

When Fish asked whether Kennedy thought something ought to be done to let this country know the nature of those war aims before proceeding with further aid to Britain, Kennedy said he did not understand the question and suggested it was one for the state department.

Walter President Of Home-Seekers

Directors Hold Annual Meeting at Office

Fred J. Walter of Spring street was elected president of the Home-Seekers' Co-operative Savings and Loan Association at the annual meeting of the board of directors held on Monday evening at the office on Ferry street. The directors' meeting followed the holding of the annual meeting of the shareholders held last night.

Other officers elected were: Samuel Stern, vice president; Irvin McCausland, secretary; Charles R. O'Connor, treasurer; Judge Frederick Stephan, Jr., and John B. Sterley, attorneys; and Peter J. Halloran, custodian of real estate.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders the following directors were elected: Fred J. Walter, Samuel Stern, Harry Hymes, Harry L. Kirchner, Henry J. Wieber and Wilmer S. Nickerson. The other directors, whose terms do not expire this year, are: Charles R. O'Connor, Irvin McCausland, John B. Sterley, William B. Byrnes, Peter J. Halloran, Eugene P. McConnell, Samuel H. Peyer, Frank L. Southard and Frank W. Thompson.

The financial statement of the association shows the year just past to have been a profitable one and the usual dividends at the rate of 3 per cent on income shares and 4 per cent on installment shares were declared.

The 55th series of installment shares, which comprised 488 shares at a matured value of $97,600, matured this month and the holders have either received the value of their shares in cash, converted them into income shares or had their mortgage satisfied.

The association was incorporated on July 5, 1885, and re-incorporated July 21, 1891. It is interesting to note that Judge Frederick Stephan, Jr., has served the association as its attorney since the association was organized more than half a century ago.

Wagner Predicts Old-Age Benefits

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—Senator Wagner (D.-N.Y.) predicted today that congress eventually will enact legislation granting old-age benefits of $30 to $40 a month to all unemployed persons over 65.

"It will be difficult now, while we are engaged in the defense program," said Wagner, who fathered the social security law, "but eventually that is what we are coming to."

Wagner said such benefits should be paid regardless of the amount persons received in their old age from the government's contributory insurance system and regardless of the amount of benefits provided by the states.

recently extended to the Mediterranean, could become effective.

The Greek high command claimed "local successful operations" on the Albanian waterfront resulting in the capture of additional Italian prisoners, and reported repulse of an Italian bombing attack on Piraeus, port of Athens.

British fighters were credited with shooting down two of the raiders, which were said to have wrecked a few houses and caused a few civilian casualties. Most of the Italian bombs were said to have fallen into the harbor.

The London admiralty reported another "mild" week of British shipping losses, with a toll of nine merchantmen totalling 30,226 tons for the 7-day period ending Jan. 12—just half the reported weekly average of 60,000 tons since the Nazis launched an intensified U-boat campaign last July.

Even as the admiralty made this report, the Germans asserted that Nazi planes had bombed three British ships totalling 17,500 tons in the past 24 hours off the coast of Ireland.

London's millions passed another raid-free night, nor was a single alarm reported elsewhere throughout England; but with daybreak, Nazi bombers resumed the attack.

Housewives on the outskirts of London dropped their kitchen work to smother fire-bombs dropped by a raider, and a single German plane swooped on an east Anglian town to deliver four machine-gunning blasts, then dump high explosives.

The Italian high command also finally acknowledged the British capture of Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, which had been held by Fascist troops since last July.

"Necessities of a strategic nature compelled the command to evacuate Kassala," the communiqué said tersely.

Capture of the town, 15 miles from Italian Eritrea, in East Africa, was reported by the British Sunday.
